healthy society for Saving plants and animals that are threatened with extinction is one of the primary focuses of the World Nature Conservation Day.

“Conservation means the wise use of the earth and its resources for the lasting good of mankind” – Gifford Pinchot

Earth's natural resources include air, minerals, plants, soil, water, and wildlife. Conservation is the care and protection of these resources so that they can be preserved for future generations. It includes maintaining diversity of species, genes, and ecosystems, as well as functions of the environment, such as nutrient cycling. Conservation is similar to preservation, but while both relate to the protection of nature, they strive to accomplish this task in different ways. Conservation seeks the sustainable use of nature by humans, for activities such as hunting, logging, or mining, while preservation means protecting nature from human use. It also underlines the need for preserving the environment for the posterity. In recent times, the need for keeping the environment has become more stark in view of relentless human overexploitation of resources, which has led to weird weather patterns increasingly being the norm the world over.
